

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT TACOMA

NATHAN ROBERT GONINAN.

Plaintiff,

V.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS, et al..

Defendants.

CASE NO. 3:17-cv-05714-BHS-JRC

ORDER DENYING PROTECTIVE ORDER AND DENYING SANCTIONS

This 42 U.S.C. § 1983 civil rights matter has been referred to Magistrate Judge J. Richard Creatura pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 636 (b)(1)(A) and (B) and Local Magistrate Judge Rules MJR 1, MJR 3, and MJR 4. Before the Court is defendants' motion for a protective order and motion for sanctions. Dkt. 67.

Plaintiff requests that the Court enter a protective order prohibiting defendants from interacting with plaintiff regarding litigation matters, and requests sanctions against defendants for allegedly allowing a psychologist to ask plaintiff inappropriate litigation questions. However, defendants have represented that the assessment is now complete, and will not be revisited for

1 two years, so there is no specific harm that needs to be addressed at this time. Since defendants 2 have represented that they were unaware of the offending questions until after the events in 3 question, plaintiff's motion for sanctions is denied.

4 However, the questions asked of plaintiff were clearly related to this litigation and were 5 inappropriate. In the future, defendants will be held accountable for the actions of their agents 6 and employees as they relate to how they conduct themselves in this litigation. Sanctions may be 7 appropriate in the future if defendants do not take appropriate measures to ensure that such 8 conduct does not occur in the future either by them – or by their agents and employees.

9 BACKGROUND

10 Plaintiff is a transgender prisoner who was awaiting a readiness assessment to determine 11 whether she was a candidate for gender confirmation surgery in June of this year. See Dk. 67, p.
12 2. On June 18, 2018, non-party Dr. Stephen Levine -- a psychologist contracted by the 13 Department of Corrections (“DOC”) to evaluate plaintiff -- interviewed plaintiff as part of the 14 readiness assessment. Dkt. 75, p. 2. After returning to his office in Ohio, Dr. Levine sent several 15 additional questions to non-party Dr. Timothy Richel, a psychologist employed by defendant 16 DOC at the Airway Heights Corrections Center (“AHCC”) where plaintiff was housed. Id.; Dkt.
17 68-6, p. 3. The questions that plaintiff alleges were improper are as follows:

- 18 a. Do you realize that the ACLU has a motive beyond getting you surgery? If so, 19 what is it? Why do you think you, in particular, were selected and not many others?
- 20 b. Do you realize what this lawsuit means for you in terms of more evaluations, deposition by lawyers asking personal questions, trial, appeal of whatever verdict is reached, risk that a verdict will take a long time to be given and that surgery if granted may not occur for another several years.
- 21 c. This process builds up your hope for surgery and asks you to be convincingly distressed—suffering from your genitals[—]asks you to exaggerate your distress, and yet it may fail to win in the court. What do you think this would do to your emotional life?

1 Dkt. 68-9, p. 3.

2 The record reflects that Dr. Richel asked plaintiff these questions on or about June 27, 3 2018, and provided a report back to Dr. Levine. Dkt. 68-9, p. 3. Dr. Levine included plaintiff's 4 answers to these questions when preparing his report on plaintiff's readiness for gender 5 confirmation surgery. Dkt. 68-6, p. 3. The record also reflects that plaintiff's counsel were 6 unaware that plaintiff was asked the follow-up questions at the time, Dkt. 68-7, and that neither 7 defendants, nor their counsel realized that Dr. Levine had emailed Dr. Richel, Dkt. 74.
8 Defendants also state that they were unaware that Dr. Richel had asked plaintiff additional 9 questions until after they were contacted by plaintiff's counsel. Dkt. 74. Plaintiff has also filed a 10 declaration from Dr. Randi C. Ettner, an expert retained by plaintiff, indicating the follow-up 11 questions were not appropriate to determine whether an individual is a candidate for gender 12 confirmation surgery. Dkt. 69, p. 2.

13 After meeting and conferring with defendants, plaintiff, through counsel, filed a motion 14 for a protective order and sanctions. Dkt. 67. Plaintiff argues that defendants engaged in bad faith 15 litigation tactics when they asked plaintiff litigation related questions, despite being asked 16 multiple times not to interact with plaintiff regarding this litigation and without notifying 17 plaintiff's counsel. Dkt. 67, pp. 6-7. Plaintiff specifically requests that the Court prohibit 18 defendants from: "(1) contacting her regarding any litigation related matter without first 19 providing her attorneys with notice; (2) engaging in conduct intended to harass and/or intimidate 20 [plaintiff]; and (3) engaging in conduct intended to disrupt the relationship between [plaintiff]
21 and her attorneys of record in this case." Id., p. 7. Plaintiff also requests that the Court sanction 22 defendants for contacting plaintiff regarding ongoing litigation because it constituted bad faith 23 litigation tactics. Id., pp. 8-9. Plaintiff argues that the follow-up questions noted above constitute 24

1 an attempt by defendants to instill fear in plaintiff, to dissuade her from continuing the litigation, 2 and to tamper with the relationship between plaintiff and her counsel. Id., pp. 8-11.

3 Defendants responded, arguing that a protective order is unnecessary because defendants 4 do not require any additional information to complete plaintiff's readiness assessment, and 5 further that the questions were not asked for an improper purpose. Dkt. 73. They also argue that 6 the mere act of asking follow-up questions to ensure a comprehensive examination does not 7 amount to bad faith litigation warranting sanctions. Id. They finally note that they were not 8 aware of the second interview until after the fact. Id. Plaintiff filed a reply. Dkt. 76.

9 DISCUSSION

10 I. Protective Order

11 The Court may issue a protective order to "protect a party or person from annoyance, 12 embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c). Though more 13 commonly used during discovery to insulate sensitive discovery materials, a protective order 14 may also be used to protect a party or potential party from intimidation or retaliation. See, e.g., 15 Ben David v. Travisono, 495 F.2d 562, 564-65 (1st Cir. 1974) (analyzing and upholding a 16 protective order against prison guards who were beating prisoner plaintiffs in retaliation for 17 filing a class action lawsuit); Wood v. Martin, No. 3:04-cv-00099-BLW, 2013 WL 1412324 at *2 18 (D. Idaho April 8, 2013) (finding a prisoner had not shown good cause why a protective order to 19 protect certain inmates from intimidation and retaliation from prison staff). The moving party 20 must demonstrate "good cause" to warrant a protective order. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c). A protective 21 order under Rule 26 is appropriate if the moving party can demonstrate a specific harm that 22 would result if the protective order is not issued, as well as good cause. See Beckman Industries,

1      Inc. v. International Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 470, 476 (9th Cir. 1992) (noting allegations of harm must 2      be specific or substantiated by articulate reasoning).

3           Plaintiff requests that the Court enter a protective order against defendants. As an initial 4      matter, the Court finds that the questions asked of plaintiff were inappropriate. The Court fails to 5      understand how the ACLU's motivation in representing plaintiff is at all relevant to whether 6      plaintiff is a candidate for gender confirmation surgery. Furthermore, the insinuation that 7      plaintiff has to appear "convincingly distressed" and "to exaggerate [her] distress" does not 8      appear to be at all related to gender confirmation surgery, but rather suggest that plaintiff should 9      not be pursuing this litigation because it will adversely impact her health. Coming from a person 10     hired by one of the defendants, this type of questioning is entirely unnecessary and inappropriate.
11     Plaintiff should not be asked to choose between pursuing her health and pursuing her rights 12     through litigation. These questions should not have been asked. Period.

13           Defendants argue that Dr. Levine and Dr. Richel are not defendants in this action and, 14     therefore, a protective order against defendants would be ineffective because it would not 15     restrain the individuals who actually engaged in the offensive conduct. The Court is advised that 16     Dr. Levine was hired by defendant DOC and that defendant DOC employs Dr. Richel.
17     Defendants should take all reasonable steps to advise those they employ and those with whom 18     they contract not to conduct themselves in a manner that interferes with any party's access to 19     justice. The Court reserves the right to utilize its inherent powers against any party who fails to 20     do so, if conducted in bad faith. See infra.

21           Defendants also argue that a protective order is unnecessary because the readiness 22     assessment has been completed, and no additional information relating to this litigation will be 23     sought from plaintiff. Dkt. 73, pp. 5-6. They have provided evidence indicating that Dr. Levine 24

1 has concluded that gender confirmation surgery is not medically necessary at this time because 2 of plaintiff's mental stability, and that the next assessment will not be for two more years. Dkt.
3 74, p. 3. Dr. Levine confirms that he does not require any additional information from plaintiff at 4 this time. Dkt. 75, p. 3. Thus, at this point in the litigation, defendants have no need to discuss 5 this litigation with plaintiff. As such, plaintiff has not shown good cause for a protective order 6 restraining defendants from discussing this litigation with her.

7         However, the Court reserves the option of reevaluating the appropriateness of a 8 protective order should further interviews become necessary.

9         II.         Sanctions

10         The Court has inherent power to sanction parties or their attorneys for improper conduct.
11 Chambers v. Nasco, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 43-46 (1991); Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S.
12 752, 766 (1980); Fink v. Gomez, 239 F.3d 989, 991 (9th Cir. 2001). The Court's "inherent power 13 'extends to a full range of litigation abuses.'" Find, 239 F.3d at 992 (quoting Chambers, 501 14 U.S. at 46-47). However, to sanction a party under the Court's inherent powers, the Court must 15 make a specific finding of "bad faith or conduct tantamount to bad faith." Fink, 239 F.3d at 994.
16 Mere recklessness is insufficient to impose sanctions – rather, "an additional factor such as 17 frivolousness, harassment, or an improper purpose" is also required. Id. at 993-94. Sanctions may 18 be imposed on a party who acted with an improper purpose even if the acts was "a truthful 19 statement or non-frivolous argument or objection." Id. at 992.

20         Again, as noted above, the Court finds the questions asked of plaintiff to be wholly 21 inappropriate. However, the alleged misconduct occurred purportedly unbeknownst to 22 defendants. Dkts. 68-6, 68-9. Because neither defendants nor their counsel purportedly had 23 knowledge of Dr. Levine's questions or Dr. Richel's interview with plaintiff, the Court finds that 24

1 plaintiff has not demonstrated bad faith or improper purpose on defendants' part and so sanctions 2 are inappropriate at this time.

3 The Court recognizes that supervisory liability is not appropriate in a § 1983 claim. But 4 the same cannot be said of parties being held accountable for an agent's actions in litigation
5 practice. See F.J. Hanshaw Enterprises, Inc. v. Emerald River Development, Inc., 244 F.3d 1128, 6 1144 (finding corporation could be held liable for sanctions based on the conduct of an employee
7 when employee acted as an "agent of his corporation"). Though the Court has found defendants 8 had no knowledge of these inappropriate litigation related questions, the Court also finds this 9 lack of knowledge unacceptable and bordering on reckless. Defendants cannot avoid all 10 responsibility for their agents' actions simply by stating they did not know what their employees 11 and contractors were doing. Defendants are therefore advised to take steps necessary to better 12 control their agents and employees in the future, or the Court will reconsider whether sanctions 13 are appropriate.

14 CONCLUSION

15 For the reasons stated above, plaintiff's motion for a protective order and sanctions (Dkt.
16 67) is denied without prejudice.
